ALL NEW, ALL YOU

KÜ TF1, ~$13,000

While Netherlands-based Kü Cycles isn't the first bike company to produce a fully custom aero tri frame, it might be the first one to do it in such an extreme way. The new TF1 uses Computational Fluid Dynamics technology and research to create a wholly unique front end that is aero at all costs. You'll also need a Kü-approved fitter to measure you and order the bike—which allows not only customization of fit, but also things like fully custom fork length and handling characteristics based on your weight distribution and ability. And while the price isn't exactly cheap, it's no surprise given this level of personalization.
